Juniper Hill Ladies Golf Club

July 7, 2014

I have come to think that a person grows in his regard for the rules as he improves his game. The best players come to love golf so much they hate to see it violated in any way. ~ Michael Murphy

July Birthdays: Lori Scottow – 2nd; Vicky Nicholas – 5th; Sara Wilding – 9th; Judy Halasak – 10th; Cami Montgomery – 14th; Tonya Courtney – 17th; Becky Ebert & Sarah Crouch – 18th; Audie Rodgers – 30th.

Question: Carol and Fran were playing hole #6. Everyone was on the green and Carol removed the flag stick and placed it off the green. Fran putted and her ball rolled down the hill and hit the flag stick. Fran thought the penalty should be on Carol but Carol didn't think so. What is the ruling? Answer on page 2.

Golf Slice Correction | Fix Golf Slice

www.golftipsandlessons.com

Like any golf strategy, correcting a slice is a process. By working your way through the possible culprits, you will eventually find the cause of your problem. Here are some time-tested tips on correcting a slice.

Although there are countless issues that can lead to slicing the ball, some are more common than others. One of the most frequent causes happens during address.

Most golfers prefer a square stance at address, where the feet, hips, and shoulders are in line with the target. If you move your left foot too far forward, the club face is likely to open at impact and the ball will fly to the right. The left foot should be directly under the left shoulder.

The same holds true for the shoulders and hips. If they are not square, the ball will not fly straight and true.

The next step is correcting the grip. This is an often overlooked golf tip for beginners. Many newer players grasp the club too tightly, which can cause the club head to open as it strikes the ball. Again, this will make the ball fly to the right. If the grip is too loose, the head will wobble at impact and that, too, can lead to slicing or hooking.

Along with tightness, your grip on the club should be neutral. Check your grip by looking down at it. You should be able to see two or three of your left-hand knuckles. If you cannot see any knuckles at all, this is a sign of an improper grip. As your hands come back into the hitting zone, they will rotate to a neutral position, causing the face to open.

Rotate your hands-not the club, just your hands-until you see a couple of knuckles. Try hitting a few balls using this new grip. Keep in mind that minor adjustments to your grip can go a long way. Keep working at it until you discover the right position for you. Once you have it, remember it!

When correcting a slice, swing tempo is important. Many golfers have a tendency to try to use their arms as their power source to get some extra yards, but this almost never works. Once they get to the top of their backswing, they allow their hands to take over and lead the downswing. As the hands come down, with everything else following, the club face will almost undoubtedly open.

From start to finish, your swing should be smooth and relaxed. Avoid the temptation to jerk the club once you get to the top of your backswing. Let your hips start the downswing and everything else will follow.

Another useful tip to correct your slice is to look at your divot. If your divot is pointing too far to the right, this may be your problem. Again, check your posture at address and make sure your feet, hips, and shoulders are in line with the target.

Thanks tournament committee! It was a fun format!

How to repair a ball mark.

www.golfdigest.com

When a ball lands on a green it leaves an indentation. These are easy to repair, and will do no damage to the green if fixed right away. Stick a divot repair tool or a tee into the turf around the outside of the mark. Gently lift the compacted soil to loosen and raise it and move around the entire ball mark in a circle. Once you've done this, take your putter and softly tap down the turf so it is level with the rest of the green. The rules of golf allow you to repair ball marks that are on your line. You are not allowed to repair spike marks, but it is a good idea to repair any pitch marks or spike marks you see before leaving the green—as long as you don't hold up play.

Answer: The penalty for hitting a removed flagstick is two strokes (loss of hole in match play). This ruling is the same regardless of whether the ball was on or off the green when hit, and is the same regardless of whether the flagstick is placed on or off the green after it is removed from the hole [Rule 17-3]. It is the player's responsibility to move the flag stick if she thinks she may have any chance of hitting it at all.

DON'T FORGET – Be good to our course; replace divots, rake bunkers and repair ball marks.
